APPOINTMENT OF A SUITABLY QUALIFIED, EXPERIENCED SERVICE PROVIDER TO DEVELOP AN IMPLEMENTATION PLAN FOR JUST TRANSITION FRAMEWORK IN SOUTH AFRICA

1. INTRODUCTION

The Presidential Climate Commission (PCC) is a multi-stakeholder body established in 2020 by the President of South Africa to advise on the country’s climate change response and support a just transition to a low-carbon climate-resilient economy and society. The commission comprises of government ministers and 22 commissioners that represent diverse perspectives of social partners, including academia, business, civil society, labour and youth. The Commission emanates from the Presidential Summit held in October 2018, when social partners agreed that a statutory entity should be formed to coordinate and oversee the just transition towards a low-carbon, inclusive, climate-resilient economy, and society.

One of the first tasks of the Presidential Climate Commission has been to develop a just transition framework, setting out a shared vision for the just transition in South Africa, the principles to guide the transition, and the policies and governance arrangements to give effect to the transition. The just transition framework builds on research, policies, and consultations on the just transition in South Africa, as well as international best practice guidelines. The framework stands on the shoulders of years of research, done by government, business, civil society, academia, and labour unions. The framework incorporates learnings from prior consultation processes, including those facilitated by the National Planning Commission.

The PCC is currently hosted at the National Economic Development and Labour Council (NEDLAC), owing to its legal establishment processes currently underway.

2. BACKGROUND

The PCC, through a multi-stakeholder process successfully delivered the first Just Transition Framework for South Africa, adopted by the Commission in May 2022 and recently approved by Cabinet in July 2022. In their approval, Cabinet approved that the framework should be integrated into the central planning system of government, specifically in the national development plan, the medium-term strategic framework, annual performance plans, and annual budgeting processes to give effect to its implementation. Government departments and other social partners have been encouraged to define their roles in relation to the objectives set out in the just transition framework.

The Just Transition Framework includes:

- A common definition of a Just Transition for South Africa
- Principles to guide the transition, including distributive, restorative and procedural justice.
- The identification of four priority at-risk sectors and value chains
- Key policy areas to give effect to the transition
- Governance arrangements and broad implementation responsibilities.
- Measures for financing a Just Transition

3. PURPOSE

The purpose of the project is to develop an implementation plan for the Just Transition Framework. The implementation plan must set out the key actions, responsibilities across social partners, timeframes and resources required to give effect to the Just Transition Framework.

4. SCOPE OF WORK

4.1. Inception Phase

4.1.1. Inception Meeting

The appointed service provider will meet with the PCC project team to further clarify the ToR, understand expectations and revise project timelines in line with the Service Level Agreement (SLA) signed with NEDLAC.

4.1.2. Stakeholder analysis

The work plan must be informed by a thorough stakeholder analysis, which aims to identify the key sectors, social partners and implementing agencies that will be integral to the success of the just transition implementation plan, and the key constituencies and actors that need to be consulted in the process of drawing up the plan. The stakeholder analysis must inform the consultation process set out in the work plan, and in particular identify which stakeholders can be consulted as groups or sectors, versus those that need to be consulted individually. The plan should also indicate what mechanisms will be used to consult stakeholders, which may include a combination of online surveys, interviews, virtual and physical meetings.

4.1.3. Inception Report

Following the engagement with the PCC project team, and the stakeholder analysis, the service provider will prepare and submit an inception report for consideration by the PCC Secretariat. The inception report will set out the applicable scope of work, research and consultation plans, associated timelines and delivery mechanisms, in line with the discussions and signed SLA.

4.2. Developing the Implementation Plan

It is envisaged that the development of the Implementation Plan will follow a two-pronged approach of policy analysis combined with targeted stakeholder engagement. These activities may be carried out in parallel and iteratively, and the service provider is welcome to propose alternative and innovative methodologies for development of the plan.

4.2.1. Policy analysis

The appointed service provider will need to undertake a desktop policy review in order to identify the strategies, programmes, regulations and interventions necessary to achieve a just transition, including initiatives within the following policy areas:

- Economic diversification, job creation and industrial policy.
- Active labour market measures and skills development.
- Social and income support, and community resilience mechanisms.
- Regulations, governance, partnerships and implementation capacity.
- Regional development mechanisms and agencies.
- Mobilising resources for a just transition.

The policy review should include the various relevant planning initiatives that are currently underway or have recently been completed, including but not limited to the following:

- High-level Implementation plan currently mapped on the Just Transition Framework
- The various Just Transition Plans developed by government agencies, social partners and social movements
- The JETP Investment Plan.
- The PCC's work on Climate Resilient Development Pathways.
- The development of a Just Transition Implementation Model by the PCC.
- The World Bank Country Climate and Development Report.
- The conceptual outline for a Just Transition Financing Mechanism.
- The sector Masterplans led by the Department of Trade, Industry and Competition.
- The detailed infrastructure planning being undertaken with respect to energy transition and water resilience and transport, among others (DBSA/NT/NPC/PCC processes) and to take into account that Cabinet recently approved the National Infrastructure Plan 2050 (NIP2050)

The above policy analysis should include a review of existing policies, plans and programmes of the various implementing agencies identified in the stakeholder analysis, as set out in their existing policy documents, development plans, strategic plans or annual performance plans. This will form the basis for a critical engagement with implementing agencies about how to incorporate just transition implementation into their work programmes.

Given the comprehensive nature of the just transition, which cuts across social, economic and environmental functions, tiers of government and work by a multiplicity of stakeholders, the implementation plan needs to be informed by a prioritisation approach which focuses attention on the key catalytic interventions that are required to drive systemic change towards a just transition. The plan must be rooted in an understanding of what makes an “effective and implementable” plan in SA, drawing from literature and previous experience.

4.2.2. Stakeholder Consultation

The just transition is based on the principle of procedural justice, which means that the views of those most affected by the transition need to be taken into account in planning processes. Accordingly, the Just Transition Implementation Plan needs to be developed in a consultative manner. The appointed service provider must:

- Review the various reports and recordings of stakeholder engagement processes conducted by the PCC and other organisations, including various thematic and provincial Presidential imbizo sessions, in order to assimilate the views already expressed.
- Undertake a process of gathering further community and social partner views regarding the priorities to be included in the implementation plan, building on the existing programme of community engagements being conducted by the PCC. The project may include an online survey of stakeholder groups to solicit their views on a few key questions related to implementing the just transition.
- Meaningfully engage with each of the social partners and implementing agencies to define what strategies, programmes and interventions they will undertake to give effect to the just transition. This should include one-on-one engagements with each of the relevant national departments and principal economic actors, as well as collective engagements with provinces, local government, economic sectors, organised labour and other social partners.
- The plan needs to be based on a realistic assessment of the existing and required capacity of the different agencies to deliver on their responsibilities, with complementary roles assigned to reinforce where capacity falls short. While a full capacity assessment is beyond the scope of this brief, the consultations should aim elicit an understanding of the capacities and capabilities stakeholders can bring to the implementation of the just transition, in order to inform a realistic assignment of responsibilities.

4.4. Finalising the Implementation Plan

The appointed service provider will draw on the policy analysis and consultations to put together a draft implementation plan. The draft implementation plan must include:

- A prioritisation matrix for determining the critical interventions that require focus, while not excluding the broad diversity of initiatives that stakeholders can pursue around the just transition.
- The policy framework and implementation model that informs the implementation plan.
- The key interventions that comprise the plan and the role of social partners and implementing agencies in implementing them.
- Assignment of specific responsibilities for implementation, broken down according to the main national departments, provinces and local government, the various economic sectors, business and labour organisations, and civil society.
