NEDLAC NEWSLETTER MAY/JUNE 2023

Connecting for social partnerships

We are pleased to present the June issue of Nedlac Connect, providing an update on the organisation's major accomplishments as supported by our social partners.

Nedlac continues to promote growth, equity, and participation through social dialogue in accordance with its vision. This can be accomplished by working tirelessly with our partners in the economic, labour, social, and environmental sectors, who work around the clock to respond to the constant challenges confronting South Africans.

Nedlac, together with government, labour, business, and community organisations continues to work on economic, labour and development issues, and related challenges facing the country.

These crises are pivotal junctures for the country, and we join forces with our partners to overcome national obstacles and set the groundwork for a better future.

In this month's issue of Nedlac Connect, we highlight key accomplishments related to, among others, the report-back meeting on energy planning from the Presidential Climate Commission, now housed at Nedlac; progress in achieving seamless food distribution; highlights from the May Economic Trends report; health and safety in the mines; and the minimum standards for schools.

We provided highlights of the engagement on the Victims Support Services (VSS) Bill, which provides a framework for the provision of integrated and multi-disciplinary services for victims of violent crimes.

We also bid farewell to trade union leader Bheki Nthalintshali as the organised labour Overall Convenor, while welcoming Cosatu's deputy general secretary, Gerald Mkhomazi Twala. In addition, we have included a selection of informative media articles to keep you abreast of issues influencing the nation.

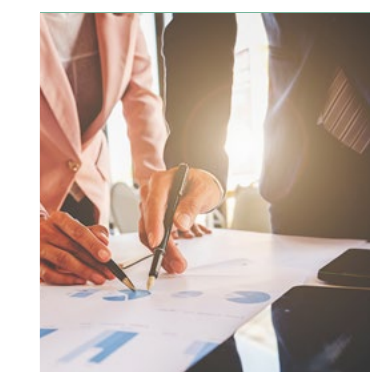

There is also a list of upcoming meetings that may interest you.

Please feel free to follow, like, and communicate with us on Facebook and Twitter. Our contact information is listed at the end of the newsletter.

PCC provides feedback on energy planning recommendations to President Cyril Ramaphosa

As part of the ongoing review of the Integrated Resource Plan (IRP2019) and Just Energy Transition Investment Plan (JET-IP), the Presidential Climate Commission, chaired by President Cyril Ramaphosa, convened in April at the Nedlac offices to consider initial recommendations and stakeholder perspectives on the electricity planning.

President Cyril Ramaphosa met with the Presidential Climate Commission which is housed at Nedlac

The Commissioners in the meeting reaffirmed its support for the Energy Action Plan and the broader reforms to the sector, including the establishment of a state-owned transmission company; lifting the cap on embedded generation; and enabling household rooftop solar systems through incentives and a feed-in tariff regime as recently announced.

It also applauded the president's and government's reaffirmation that our future energy mix will be aligned with the Just Transition Framework and designed to sustain investments, such as those prioritised in the JET-IP.

Priority issues identified included energy poverty, incentives for SMMEs;

the pace of decarbonisation; the role of the state and the extent of privatisation; skills development and employment; corruption and vandalism of the electricity infrastructure, and local government constraints.

The commission reiterated the necessity for a "transition-capable" developmental state to navigate the complexities of transition and the urgency of capacity-building at local level, including funding to support the electricity supply mandate and an integrated development planning and budgeting process.

On the issue of transparency, the PCC urged governance and oversight mechanisms for all transition funding and climate finance, to oversee and track international commitments and measure impact. The PCC also called for a separate adaptation and resilience investment plan focusing on water and food security, agriculture, and tourism, among others.

President Ramaphosa had unveiled the five-year JET-IP in November last year and tasked the Commission with consulting stakeholders on the plan and developing recommendations for government consideration.

The PCC will submit final recommendations for deliberation on areas of social partner consensus regarding the implementation of the JET-IP and the anticipated future electricity outlook. The recommendations report is available at www.climatecommission.org.za

Energy Security Working Group starts talks on wheeling electricity

In April, the Energy Security Workstream held a round-table event at Nedlac to discuss the issue of wheeling electricity over the transmission and distribution grids to allow Independent Power Producers (IPPs) and electricity traders to supply power to customers independently of Eskom.

Energy wheeling is crucial as discussed by speakers at a Nedlac roundtable

Wheeling is the conveyance of energy from a generator to an end-user in a different region through existing distribution or transmission networks. This may also involve multiple distinct distribution networks, such as Eskom delivering power to a municipality. Therefore, energy is delivered to all consumers, regardless of whether it is supplied by Eskom or a third-party IPP.

Participants, in addition to the social partners, included the Department of Mineral Resources and Energy, Eskom Transmission, national and international experts, traders, and municipalities. Municipalities are a key player in wheeling and one of the conclusions of the meeting was the need for the more rapid capacity building of municipalities to introduce an appropriate regulatory framework for wheeling.

In addition, to the above-mentioned wheeling workshop, the Energy Security Workstream established two task teams earlier this year focusing on communications and demand management and ways to mitigate the economic impact of load-shedding.

The communications task team has engaged with the Government Communications and Information System (GCIS) to support appropriate energy crisis-related messaging and provided updates to social partners. Efforts are being made to develop unified messages to educate the public and dispel misconceptions.

During the current quarter, the task team of social partners began discussing the Department of Mineral Resources and Energy's revised Electricity Pricing Policy.

Nedlac engages on slashing red tape, expediting food provision to the needy

Nedlac organised a dialogue session on Food Distribution to Vulnerable Groups and Communities in March, attended by officials from national and provincial governments, business representatives, organised labour, and civil society.

The discussions followed those of the Cost-of-Living Rapid Response Task Team (CLRRTT) at Nedlac, which identified the need to enhance and extend the distribution of food to vulnerable groups and communities.

One of the challenges discussed was the lack of coordination between government departments regarding food donations and parcels, including the targeting of correct beneficiaries. The Department of Social Development and the Department of Education emphasised the need for collaboration between stakeholders.

Civil Society and NGOs highlighted problems in supporting sustainable food systems because of obstacles in the value chain. Various businesses, as represented by the Consumer Goods Council of South Africa (CGCSA), as well as NGOs like Food Forwarders SA, assist needy communities by donating excess food. However, the CGCSA reiterated the urgent need to address red tape in the donation processes, where the issues of inadequate food labelling and liability in respect of surplus food become impediments. Food Forwarders SA, which recovers edible surplus food from the consumer goods supply chain and redistributes it to community organisations, presented information on how food banks operate and reasons for the abundance of surplus food in the country.

a global network focused on empowering the poor, described the role of informal traders in food distribution.

Organised labour underscored the need for effective food security interventions, advocating collaboration with partners for better coordination.

The dialogue session identified several recommendations for the CLRRTT's work programme.

Eskom blackouts batter economic growth trends report

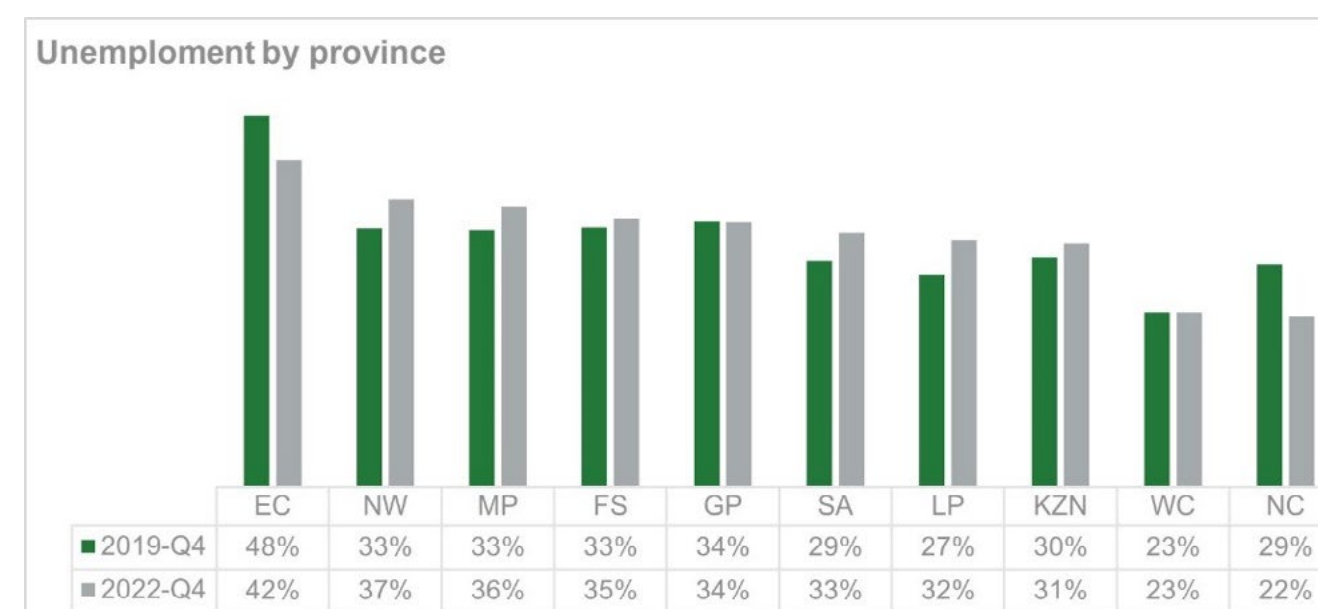

The main indicators in the May 2023 issue of the Economic and Employment Trends Report show that the unprecedented levels of load-shedding have negatively impacted economic growth. The country's growth outlook has continued to weaken, with the Reserve Bank expecting growth of only 0.3% in 2023.

Gauteng and the Western Cape's unemployment rates have recovered to pre-pandemic levels, while those in the Eastern and Northern Cape's have also improved.

The report also showed that higher interest rates have affected poorer households significantly more than affluent ones. While household consumption remained relatively stable in 2022, household savings decreased despite higher interest rates, demonstrating the rising cost-of-living pressure faced by South Africans.

Trends in Loadshedding by stage over 10 years.

Unemployment Statics by Province from 2019 Quarter to 2022 Quarter.

The level of household credit has deteriorated because of higher lending rates, decreased consumer income growth, and rising consumer prices, reflected in the consumer credit index of TransUnion, which has dropped below the neutral level of 50.

The tightening of monetary policy has continued. The South African Reserve Bank has increased rates by 425 basis points since November 2021 in response to persistently higher inflation.

As a result, lending rates have increased: the prime lending rate is now 11.25%. As a result, households and businesses are spending more to service their obligations, whereas savers are receiving higher returns on their funds.

Between 2020/21 and 2025/26, only 4.8% annual growth is projected for government expenditure. Despite this slowdown, expenditure as a percentage of GDP has continued to rise, due to even more constrained GDP growth.

In recent years, there has been a significant decline in investment, driven by reduced investment in construction, residential buildings, and transportation equipment. At the April 2023 Investment Conference, investors pledged R1.5 trillion; however, it is uncertain whether all of these funds will be invested in new projects.

Since the Covid-19 pandemic, the total value of the country's international trade has increased significantly. In 2022, imports and exports were 78% and 58% greater than in 2020. Imports from China, India, the United States, the United Arab Emirates, Germany, and Saudi Arabia (capital products and oil) drove import growth the most.

Primary products (agriculture and mining) primarily drove export growth to Japan, the United States, Germany, the Netherlands, Mozambique, China, and the United Kingdom.

Mining health and safety regulations reviewed

The Mine Health and Safety Amendment (MHSA) Bill has been thoroughly discussed by Nedlac and its social partners, and a Nedlac Report will soon be finalised.

The Amendment Bill seeks to amend the Mine Health and Safety Act 29 of 1996 and promote the health and safety of mine employees and others by streamlining administrative processes, strengthening enforcement provisions, reinforcing offences and penalties, and removing ambiguity from certain definitions and expressions.

Minister Mantashe is required to consider the Nedlac Report before introducing the Bill to Parliament.

The Department of Mineral Resources and Energy (DMRE) introduced a draft of the Bill at the Nedlac Labour Market Chamber in September 2022, after which the Chamber established the MHSA Bill Task Team, comprising government, organised business and labour, to work on it before submission to Cabinet.

This was tabled at the first task team's November 2022 meeting, which was followed by robust discussions and concluded in May this year.

Through a rigorous engagement process, the task team agreed to some of the government's proposals, provided substantial amendments to certain sections, and made additional recommendations.

These include:

- The establishment of the Mine Health and Safety Inspectorate, with its administration and functions remaining within the DMRE rather than being a separate legal entity as required by the Act. Social partners endorsed this proposal and advocated for the Chief Inspector to retain his/her authority to promote mine health and safety and to eradicate any potential undue influence or disempowerment in the execution of the Inspectorate's duties.

- The creation of an Administrative Fine Fund to be administered by the Mine Health and Safety Council (MHSC) and used to promote mine health and safety.
- The timeframes for communicating findings of an employee's unfitness for work and the appeals process for such findings.
- A provision to prohibit any person (who is adversely affected by the decision of an Inspector or Chief Inspector of Mines) from applying to the Labour Court for a review of such administrative decision. That person should exhaust all applicable internal appeal processes, except for a decision contemplated by section 55B of the Act, which relates to the imposition of fines by the Chief Inspector.

- A provision allowing the Labour Court to suspend the decision of the Chief Inspector of Mines, Inspector, or any relevant official pending the outcome of an appeal if there are reasonable grounds to do so.
- Provisions requiring the Minister to consult the Mine Health and Safety Council expeditiously and act promptly on issues that may negatively impact the health and safety of employees.

Nedlac bids Farewell to Bheki Ntshalintshali, Overall Convenor for Organised Labour

Nedlac social partners expressed their appreciation to Bheki Ntshalintshali, the former General Secretary of COSATU and Nedlac's outgoing Overall Convenor for Organised Labour, at a farewell and thank you function arranged for him on 26 May 2023 by Nedlac. Ntshalintshali had served as Overall Convenor for Organised Labour at Nedlac for 14 years.

The event kicked off with an address by the Minister of Employment and Labour, Thulas Nxesi who shared with the meeting how Ntshalintshali had grown from being a taxi driver to holding some of the most important positions in the country and world including representing trade unions at the ILO and being the deputy chair of the Human Resources and Development Council.

The Minister praised Ntshalintshali for his integrity and wisdom. He was followed by the Overall Convenor of Organised Business, Kaizer Moyane, who praised his homeboy for his sense of justice, concern for the vulnerable, solution-orientated approaches and pursuance of good governance. Other Overall Convenors and Nedlac staff who spoke emphasised the wisdom, humbleness, reasonableness, ability to listen and attention to detail that Ntshalintshali showed. His institutional memory, should not be lost to the cause of social dialogue, they said.

When it came to Ntshalintshali's time to speak, he reminded the meeting of the very many leaders of social partners that he had served with including Raymond Parsons, Bobbie Godsell, Mbazima Shilowa and Cunningham Ngcukana.

As a farewell gift, Ntshalintshali received a book voucher and an Orlando Pirates T-shirt with the No 10 emboldened on it from the Nedlac social partners and staff. He will definitely be remembered as a Nedlac legend. Organised Business also took the opportunity to gift Ntshalintshali with a memorabilia book of Nelson Mandela.

Ntshalintshali has been active in the trade union movement for nearly three decades, having begun as a shop steward. Since 2015, Ntshalintshali has served as general secretary of Cosatu. Gerald Mkhomazi Twala, the deputy general secretary of Cosatu, will succeed him in the Nedlac position.

Gerald Twala is the newly appointed Overall Convenor for Organised Labour

The Nedlac secretariat on behalf of social partners welcomes Gerald Mkhomazi Twala as the new Overall Convenor for Labour, succeeding Bheki Ntshalintshali, who has held the position since 2009.

Gerald was designated deputy general secretary of the Congress of South African Trade Unions (COSATU) last year after having spent 18 years in trade unionism.

Gerald began his trade unionism career 18 years ago.

Twala began his career as a trade unionist when he was elected as a shop steward and a local secretary for the South African Municipal Workers Union (SAMWU) in the Greater Tzaneen Municipality (Limpopo Province) in 2005.

In 2005, in the same year, he was also elected as South African Municipal Workers Union (SAMWU) Far North Regional Deputy Chairperson.

In 2009, he was elected as the union's regional secretary.

In 2012, he was elected SAMWU Limpopo Provincial Deputy Secretary, and from 2012 to 2014 he served as a member of the union's Central Executive Committee.

During this time, he led the SAMWU negotiating team at the South African Local Government Bargaining Council, Limpopo Division. From 2014 to 2022, he was appointed COSATU Limpopo Provincial Secretary, and prior to his election as deputy general secretary, he served as a member of the Limpopo Provincial Government Premier's Economic Growth Advisory Board.

Twala was born in Pretoria's Mamelodi. He attended Sikhanyisele Primary as well as Zamani Primary. He attended Nkateko High School (Lulekani, Phalaborwa) and Dumela High School (Johannesburg, Rhulani village - Tzaneen) for his secondary education.

He obtained a teaching certificate from Tivumbeni College of Education (Tzaneen) and subsequently taught in Tzaneen, Limpopo, and Mkhuhlu, Bushbuckridge, Mpumalanga.

Twala joined the Greater Tzaneen Municipality in Limpopo Province in 2004 as a Special Projects Officer and subsequently as the IDP Manager. In 2008, he received a Certificate in the NQF 6 Specialist Local Government Programme from the Durban University of Technology.

Nedlac and its social partners congratulate Twala on his new position and look forward to a mutually beneficial relationship.

Legislation assisting crime victims

Nedlac has concluded its work on the Victims Support Services (VSS) Bill, which establishes a framework for providing victims of violent offenses with integrated and multidisciplinary services.

The bill also seeks to improve the efficacy, effectiveness, and coordination of all services offered to victims of violent crime by the various government departments in the Justice, Crime Prevention and Security, and Social Clusters.

Overall Convenors endorsed the Nedlac report on the VSS Bill in May 2023. The Minister of Social Development and the Minister of Employment and Labor were provided with the final Nedlac report. The report is also accessible to the public on the Nedlac website. Proceed here: (<https://nedlac.org.za/wp-content/uploads/2023/05/Nedlac-Report-on-Victims-Support-Services-Bill-2023.pdf>)

In November 2022, the Department of Social Development presented the bill to the VSS Task Team, comprised of representatives from organized labor, organized business, government, and community constituencies, at Nedlac.

The task force deliberated on the bill, and at the conclusion of the process, there were areas of accord between social partners and government proposals, as well as areas where social partners proposed modifications. Social partners also provided the government with important issues to consider when finalizing and implementing the bill.

The significance of assessing and evaluating victims (of any type) was a central topic of discussion. As police stations are the most common sites of secondary victimization, professionals or police officers tasked with screening victims should be certified and trained.

Additionally, these screening procedures should take place in private rooms, not in public areas of the station. In addition, the social partners felt strongly that the government should closely monitor the service delivery by the South African Police Service and other relevant organizations in relation to victim support and provide regular updates to the Development Chamber.

Inputs on school uniform norms, standards for infrastructure provided to Department of Basic Education

A Nedlac task team has completed giving input on the Department of Basic Education (DBE) Minimum Uniform Norms and Standards for Public School Infrastructure Regulations. These regulations define infrastructure requirements for schools and specify minimum infrastructure requirements all schools must satisfy for proper operation.

The Nedlac report on the Minimum Uniform Norms and Standards for Public School Infrastructure Regulation has been completed.

Source: clonard.co.za

In accordance with the South African Schools Act of 1996, the Minister of DBE promulgated and published Minimum Uniform Norms and Standards for Public School Infrastructure for public comment in Government Gazette No. 10067 on 29 November 2013.

The purpose of reviewing the regulations was to:

- address the constitutional issues in terms of the judgment heard at the Bisho High Court of the Eastern Cape between Equal Education and the Minister of Basic Education and others. The Court ruled that some sections of the Regulations must be reviewed as they were inconsistent with the Constitution;
- ensure compliance with section 19 (1) of the regulations that mandate the DBE to periodically review these, ensuring they remain effective and efficient in serving the needs of the teaching and learning process.

Social partners agreed with all provisions in the regulations on the following key issues:

- schools must have access to any form of power supply, water supply, or sanitation.
- classrooms built from mud, asbestos, and wood, must be replaced and comply with the South African National Building Regulations (NSB), i.e. SANS 10400 and Occupational Health and Safety Act 85 of 1993.
- schools must have sufficient space to accommodate all students.

Organised Labour raised a concern regarding the ablution facilities in schools. The numbers of learners and teachers increases, and at the very least facilities should not decrease in proportional terms. Government noted Labour's concern, undertook to reconsider this matter and will engage the National Treasury as these would require additional funding to fulfill this mandate.

On 19 May 2023, the Nedlac Manco approved the report on the Minimum Uniform Norms and Standards for Public School Infrastructure Regulations, and it is available on the Nedlac website. What the amended employment equity laws mean for diversity and transformation

While the Employment Equity Amendment Act 2020 (EEEE), and the Broad-based Black Economic Empowerment Act (B-BBEEA) legislation have been criticised for imposing onerous compliance measures on already struggling businesses in South Africa, fostering diversity, inclusion and equality in the workplace has been proven to be good business practice.
